

Details of University Adherence to FERPA Requirements

Generally, it is Drake University's policy to request a signed and accountability in student development.

There is no law forbidding students from voluntarily sharing information with parents after the student receives it from the University, and no consent form is required for such voluntary sharing between student and parent.

Under the following special circumstances, the University may release student education records to parents or others without student consent:

In an emergency, federal law (FERPA) allows the University to contact parents and other appropriate persons and disclose the information necessary to protect the health or safety of the student or other persons; their parents' access to their record via former orientation. Students may authorize their parents' access to their record via tab in myDrake (the campus web portal).

FERPA allows the University to disclose to parents or legal guardians information about their students' violation of any federal, state or local law, or any rule or policy of the institution governing
